C00240 □	M2 Project Organisation	Educating parents to reinforce Arini values	Parents are not bystanders in a child's education, they are co-educators, role models, and emotional anchors. The Arini Method sees parental involvement not as a bonus, but as a core pillar. There is concern about how well parents are brought into the educational journey, particularly around values like empathy, critical thinking, non-punitiveness, and natural curiosity. Educating parents means helping them understand, support, and reflect the same principles that children are exposed to in learning environments.	Parents understand and reinforce learning approaches at home What Could Go Wrong? Lack of parental engagement could dilute the method's impact	Parental programs planned for Months 7–9, but structure unconfirmed	Distribute a simple 'Arini at Home' starter guide before workshops
